Claims Memory Is Restored in Crash

Man at Marshall Held for Manslaughter as Companion Is Killed

MARSHALL, Tex.—While charges of manslaughter and driving an automobile while intoxicated were being prepared against Thomas Scott Goolsby, formerly of Little Rock, officers were confronted Wednesday with a statement from the youth that his memory, lost for several years was returned in an auto accident Tuesday night which claimed the life of Cecil Teague.

Teague died several hours after the crash. Goolsby and Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Purcell, of Jefferson, are recovering from serious injuries.

Golsby, an employee of a Dallas firm, told nurses and physicians that he lost his memory several years ago at New Orleans after being slugged in a holdup. He used the name of Morrison until 1929, when recognized at Abilene during an extended search instigated by his parents.

Investigators tracing the activities of Goolsby and Teague on the night of the accident raided an inn near here and confiscated a quantity of whisky. The two men were reported to have had a difficulty at the inn.

The owner of a store near the inn told officers that Teague and Goolsby stopped there on the night of the accident and that Teague apparently had been badly beaten. The store owner said Goolsby told him that he had whipped Teague and intended beating him again.

Funeral services will be held for Teague here Thursday afternoon.

Texas Looms as Great Center for Phosphate

CHICAGO.—(AP)—James C. Kennedy, president of the Central and Southwest Utilities company, reported Wednesday Texas might soon become the nations leading state in the production of phosphate products. This prospect, he announced, was a result of discovery of a 400,000,000 ton deposit of phosphate shell in gulf waters along the Texas coastline from Corpus Christi to the mouth of the Rio Grande.

Phosphate shell, Kennedy's report stated, was of high commercial value. The potential revenue from the formation referred to was estimated at many millions of dollars.

Schools, Pensions Hit By Bond Bar

Projects in Hempstead Reported Affected by Credit Retrenchment

Arkansas' public school building projects, Confederate pensions and other long-financed state activities are embarrassed by the recent agreement between the state and national bond houss to float no more Arkansas securities until November 15, and only a limited amount for a year after that.

Reporting what is apparently an official opinion from the state capitol, the Arkansas Democrat said Wednesday night that Confederate pension payments will be held up for at least four months, that payment will be attempted after that on a quarterly basis instead of monthly, but resumption of payment under any circumstance is considered doubtful for a long time. The agreement with the bond houses forbids issuing $1,750,000 in pension bonds scehduled for sale in September.

Among other projects, that have gone by the board are the starte armory bond issue, including a building for Hope; and many school projects, either cancelled or indefinitely delayed.

In Hempstead county, the proposed new consolidated school near Patmos appears to be side-tracked at least for this year, on account of the curtailment of funds available to the state's school revolving fund.

Constrution has stopped on the incomplete new building at Blevins, it is reported; but the remodeling of the old building, and construction of the new structure at McCaskill, all in the Blevins consolidated district, are to be completed, it is understood.

School men hope to iron out some of their financial difficulties, but the curtailment of state credit for the rest of the year has caused wide-spread retrenchment, according to the Democrat story.

Clanton is survived by his mother and several brothers and sisters.

Seven Former Governors of Arkansas Still Living

One Among Number Is Democratic Leader in Senate. Another Is a Federal Judge. Others Connected With Institutions and Business Affairs of State

One of them went from the governor's chair to the United States senate and there became the Democratic leader. Another, though a Democrat, was elevated to afederal judgeship by a Republican president.

The senator is Joe T. Robinson, minority leader in the senate. He served less than two months as governor, and has the distinction of having served as congressman, governor and United States senator all within 60 days.

He was a member of congress when he was sworn in as governor in January, 1913. The legislature which then was in session elected him United States senator to succeed the late James P. Clark. He has been in the senate since.

John E. Martineau is the former governor who is now a federal judge. He was sworn in as governor in January, 1927. Early in the second year of his term, he was appointed United States judge for the eastern district of Arkansas by President Coolidge.

Martineau's term as governor was marked by the enactment of the road law which bears his name and which started Arkansas on a $1,000,000 road building program.

Tom J. Terrel, who preceded Martineau as governor, is now a practicing attorney in Little Rock. He served one term as governor.

Dr. Charles H. Brough, the state's war-time governor, is now director of public relations for the University of Arkansas.

George W. Donaghey, governor when the new state house was started, is a Little Rock capitalist. He has virtually retired from active business. He was governor for two terms, starting in 1909.

J. M. Futrell, now chancellor at Paragould, served five months after Senator Robinson resigned to enter the senate. He obtained the office after a contest with William K. Oldham which the supreme court decided.

Oldham was elected president pro tem o fthe senate at the beginning of the 1913 legislative session and Futrell was elected president pro tem at the end of the ssion.

In those days, Arkansas had no lieutenant governor and the president pro tem of the senate was next in line for the governorship. The question arose as to whether Oldham or Futrell was entitled to the office and the supreme court awarded it to Futrell. He served five months until the late George W. Hays was elected at a special election to fill out the unexpired term.

X. O. Pindall is the seventh former governor now living. He was elected by the legislature in 1907 when Governor John S. Little became incapacitated by ill health soon after he took office. Pindall in recent years has practiced law in Little Rock.

Senator Robinson was the last governor until Judge Martineau resigned in 1928, who failed to finish his term of office.

During this fifteen-year period, Governor Terral was the ony one who did not serve two terms.

Lumber Building Will Be Let For Third and Walnut

Hempstead County Co. to Put Up Structure 62 by 136 Feet

A BUILDERS' DEPOT

Concern Is Local Unit of Ozan-Graysonia Company

Bids are to be asked this week for the construction of a new brick building, 62 feet by 136, a Third and Walnut streets for the Hempstead County Lumber company, a unit of the Ozan-Graysonia company, Architect D. F. Weaver of this city announced Thursday.

Estimates call for an expenditure of around $8,000 on construction of the building only, Mr. Weaver said, and the lumber company is contemplating other improvements at the Third and Walnut intersection.

The new structure will face on Walnut some yards away from the actual corner, and will run back to the Waddle building on the alley leading from Third street. This will form an L-shaped structure, around the vacant square at the street intersection.

The new building will be used exclusively for lumber storage and sales, while the Hempstead Lumber Company's offices and display rooms for roofing and other accessories will be maintained in the Waddle structure.

Ozan-Graysonia bought the Waddle property on Third to the corner, and the Waddle and Singleton properties on Walnut street, to command the entire intersection last month; and early this month announced the incorporation of the Hempstead County Lumber company as its local operating company.

Recognizing Great Men

TRYING to name the Americans of today who will be remembered most fondly by their countrymen a century or so later is a fascinating and risky game. Fame plays queer tricks, and greatness is not always recognizable at close range.

H. M. Tomlinson, the famous British author, recently pointed out that America of about 1850 gave to posterity three men who were almost entirely ignored by their contemporaries—Thoreau, Melville and Whitman.

During the decade before the Civil War most Americans had never heard of this trio. The "great men" of that day were politicians and businessmen. California was being developed, railroads were being built, vast fortunes were being made. Knotty problems of statesmanship were engaging public attention.

The really important work, to all appearances, was being done by the men who had those jobs in hand. Yet, as Mr. Tomlinson says, when America's great factories have become rust, the world will still be grateful for the possession of Thoreau's "Walden," Melville's "Moby Dick" and Whitman's "Leaves of Grass."

All of which, undoubtedly, would pain the good people of 1850 very deeply if they knew about it. For all three of these men were, from the ordinary point of view, loafers. Thoreau went to a cabin by a pond to avoid the cares of the workaday world. Melville went off on a whaling vessel and doubtless disappointed all of his friends. Whitman loafed gloriously and went about town looking very much like a rather crack-brained tramp.

Yet, of all the men of that era, these three are the ones to whom posterity gives the most admiration.

Who are the Americans of today who will be recognized as great a century hence? The great industrialists, politicians and financiers—or some slightly disreputable artists and writers at whom we look with lofty disegard?

The Hay Mow Movement

One national societies of one kind and another this country surely has more than its share. Yet there ought to be plenty of room for the Society of Hay Mow Sleepers, a group recently organized by a number of New York and Chicago business executives.

The aims of this outfit are simple. Membership is open to men who either were brought up on farms and slept in hay mows as a matter of course or were brought up in cities and wanted to sleep in hay mows but never did.

The club houses, naturally enough, will be barns, strategically located in various parts of the country. Each barn will contain a hay mow, and any member can gratify his passion for hay mow sleeping at any time simply by repairing to one of these club barns.

A good many devices have been brought fourth in the last few years to soothe and divert the tired business man. Musical shows are staged in his honor, clam bakes are arranged, summer camps have been brought into being; but could any of these really compete with a good hay mow?

Sleeping in a hay mow is, after all, one of the noblest pursuits open to mankind. In the first place, hay makes an ideal bed—soft, rustling, warm in cool weather and cool in warm weather. It is odorous with a spicy fragrance that brings sleep almost of its own efforts.

Besides, the surroundings serve to increase the sleeper's enjoyment. The hay mow is dusky, quiet, secluded; and on rainy days, when the raindrops drum on the roof and the eaves drip musically, the hay mow sleeper has no cause to envy anyone on earth.

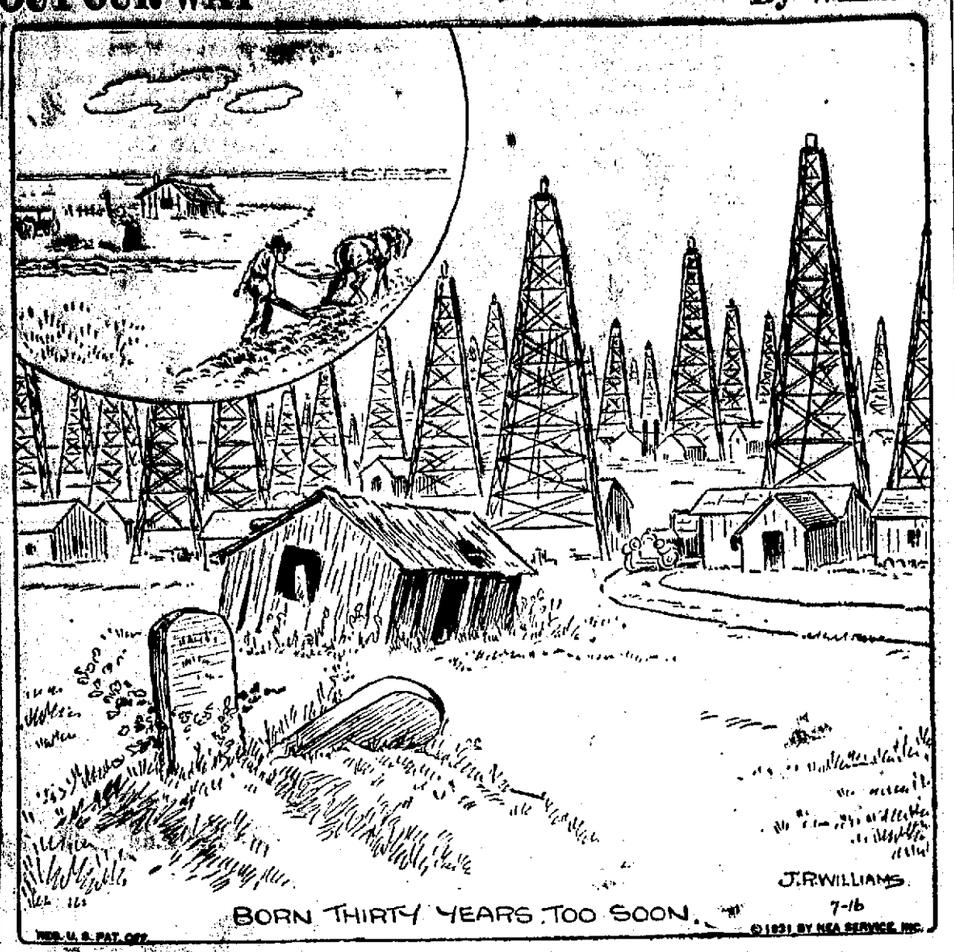

There ought to be a big place for such a club. There may be just one trouble; the organizers will probably find themselves swamped with applications.

Diplomacy By Telephone

ONE of the most interesting things about the recent reparations-war debts moratorium negotiations is that they were conducted largely by trans-Atlantic telephone. For the first time in history, statesmen have talked back and forth across the ocean instead of confiding their interchange of thoughts to courier or cable transmission.

The neormous advantage that this gives to the modern diplomat is obvious. Five minutes actual conversation can adjust two conflicting points of view better than a whole sheaf of cablegrams. It is hardly straining the imagination to look forward to the day when heads of governments will talk with one another directly, without the use of any intermediaries at all. When they do, international understands should benefit immeasurably.—Jonesboro Tribune.

OUT OUR WAY —By Williams

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The United States has the largest military budget in the world and our increase in military expenditures over the pre-war outlay has been greater than that of any other power.

At the same time the percentage of national income that goes into armaments is much smaller in this country than in any of the important European nations.

The issue of armaments is coming in for more and more discussion as a world which is spending $4,000,000,000 a year for martial purposes draws nearer to the first General Conference for Reduction and Limitation of Armaments at Geneva next February. Lately it has been mentioned in connection with European war debts and it has been suggested that this country might consent to a revision of terms only in case a radical reduction of military expenditures was made.

MacDonald's Charge

Premier MacDonald of England has created a sensation by his assertion that Britain had been reducing while the United States and other nations were increasing. But as far as this country was concerned that shouldn't have been classed as important news if true. Supporting one of President Hoover's warnings of a mounting military budget, the White House last year gave out a table showing that our own rose from $625,000,000 for 1928 to $741,000,000 for 1930, while the United Kingdom's budget was dropping from $571,000,000 to $547,000,000.

Great Britain is the one exception in the general tendency of more money for defense and war preparations.

Europe puts out about 60 per cent of the money spent on armaments and the United States and the rest of the world each about 20 per cent.

Last available military estimates for the larger powers showed that Russia, except for Germany, was the only country whose outlay was not well in advance of pre-war. Russia's 1930 expenses were below those she made in the last pre-war year. Great Britain showed the smallest of the proportionate increases, the United States the largest increase and Japan next to the largest.

World Army Budgets

Expressing last year's budgets in 1913 dollars, experts say that Russia spent 49 per cent less on her army and navy than in the 1913-14 year, the United States 89 per cent more, Japan 49 per cent more, Italy 41 per cent more, France 27 per cent more and the United Kingdom less than five per cent more. Germany's military budget has been down about 75 per cent owing to compulsory limitation.

Adding on the military expenses of the British dominions would make the British budget more closely approach that of the United States and the combination of France and her allied European group—Belgium, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia—spends at least $100,000,000 more than our military outlay.

U. S. Pays Better

In defense of the size of the American budget it is sometimes pointed out that we pay our soldiers better and give them better rations. The 135,000 men in our regular army and our 235,000 reserves make a combined total far smaller than that of any of the other five leading nations. Russia has 715,000 troops and 5,600,000 reserves, according to compilations by our War Department a couple of years ago, France 645,000 troops and 5,440,000 reserves, Italy 355,000 troops and 3,055,000 reserves, Japan 210,000 troops and 2,040,000 reserves and the British Empire 395,000 troops and 570,000 reserves. Except for this country and the British Empire the armies mentioned are "conscript" armies. The world has 6,000,000 men under arms and 28,000,000 more reserves, according to the War Department count.

Although we have the largest military budget it's much less of a burden on us because we can best afford the money. It has been computed that the French have spent 4.56 of their national income on armaments, the Italians 4.33 per cent, the British 3.03 per cent and this country only 1.09 per cent.

We never weary hearing old words spoken,
Old phrases that we make of life apart;
They are great-shouldered steeds long halter-broken,
On which friend rides to friend, and heart to heart.
Such words as "mine" and "thing" and "all sincerely,"
And "love" and "faithfully" and that word, "dear"—
As life goes on we value them more dearly,
So rich they grow, so warm they greet the ear.
They are the words that every tongue has spoken;
Unsung themselves, the made of life a part;
The ever gentle steeds long halter-broken
On whom friend rides to friend, and heart to heart.—Selected.

New Plane Motor Is Ready For Test

Diesel Engine Designed For Use in Freight Planes

BERLIN—(AP)—New non-stop flying records are likely to be just around the corner if the new Junkers heavy-oil airplane engine demonstrated here lives up to the claims of its builders.

Junkers engineers, basing their estimates on test flights with the new engine, say a plane powered with it will travel 47 per cent farther, on the same weight of fuel, than with a gasoline motor of equal horsepower.

In other words, if Chamberlin and Levine could repeat their 1927 New York to Germany flight with the new engine, they would land nearer Jerusalem than Berlin.

And as for Lindbergh, he could almost have made it from San Diego to Paris direct in one hop.

Whether any such long-distance records will be attempted with a Diesel-engined plane this year remains to be seen, but the heavy-oil Junkers will be in regular service before summer ends on 10 freight planes of the Luft Hansa.

In this service it is expected to demonstrate its commercial value, for its low fuel consumption permits twice as much pay load to be carried on long flights. At the same time, using cheap oil instead of gasoline, it reduces the fuel bill 65 per cent.

Due to its narrow front it is easily adapted to streamlining of the cowling.

No spark-plugs or other electrical ignition devices are used, the motor being started by compressed air. Combustion is caused by the mingling of fuel-oil spray with air heated to 400 degrees centigrade by high compression in the cylinders.

Broken electrical connections thus are removed as a fire risk, and the fuel used is so heavy that it will not burn even when touched with a lighted match.

The technical difficulties overcome in trimming a Diesel engine down to a practicable weight for air service may be gathered from a comparison of a new motor with an ordinary marine Diesel. A 2700-horsepower motorship carries about 800,000 pounds of motor; an airplane powered with four of the new Diesel engines would develop 2800 horsepower with but 7,000 pounds of motor.

Indian Go Into Powwow Over Air Field Grant

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—An Indian powwow has been added to the commerce department's list of ways in which airtrails are being extended over the nation.

Negotiations for an intermediate landing field in New Mexico, on land of the Acoma Indians, culminated in a traditional tribal assembly.

Though the head of the tribe is a university graduate, and most of the Acomas understand and use English, an officially designated interpreter and airways division field men were the only ones to use the language during the proceedings.

The first attempt to open negotiations was postponed because the date conflicted with a "fight" scheduled between the Acomas and Lagunas.

Expert Finds Nitrogen Products Lint Cheaper

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—R. A. Wasson, agronomist of Louisiana State University extension division says cotton side-dressed wtih nitrogen fertilizer produces more and cheaper lint per acre.

It is essential to fertilize cheap cotton in order to secure greater yields per acre, Wasson says. He cites experiments conducted in 1929 and 1930 with nitrate of soda.

In 1929, 200 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre on 24 upland demonstrations in 21 parishes gave an average increase of 457 pounds of seed cotton per acre, paying a profit of $24.94.

In the dry year of 1930, applications of nitrate in 19 demonstrations in 19 parishes gave an average increase of 448 pounds per acre and a profit of $13.11.

Consider your Adam's Apple!!
Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants
"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Place your finger on your Adam's Apple. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants. Reach for a LUCKY instead.

Here is what one of America's great scientists, whom we retained to study LUCKY STRIKE'S manufacturing process, says about the mellowing effect of Ultra Violet Rays which are included in our exclusive "TOASTING" Process:

"The effects of this ultra violet treatment on the tobacco have been tested and are found to involve an increase in what is called the 'mildness' of the tobacco."

"When I visited Reidsville and went through the LUCKY STRIKE plant, I found one explanation for the growth of LUCKY STRIKE. Your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of tobaccos is a splendid example of achievement. It is the new order of the day."

Remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America which offers you the throat protection of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process—that secret heating process which expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos, and which includes the extra mellowing benefits of modern Ultra Violet Rays. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple". Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

Oldest Employe at State Capital Is 60

Will Soon Have Worked in Supreme Court Office 44 Years

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—When next October 1 comes, J. Harry Campbell will have rounded out 44 years service in the state supreme court clerk's office, which makes him the oldest employe, in point of service, in the state-capitol, even though he is only 60.

Back in 1887, Mr. Campbell, then a lad of 14, began "helping out" without pay on Saturdays and in the afternoons in the supreme court clerk's office when his father, the late W. P. Campbell, was clerk. His father was clerk of the court from the early '80's until the late '90's.

Mr. Campbell was given a paid position in the office when he was 16 and has served under three clerks in his 44 years. Upon the death of his father, he was retained by P. D. English, who was clerk until 1912 when W. F. Sadler, present clerk, was appointed.

Mr. Campbell began his apprenticeship and tok his first "pay job" with the supreme court when the state's highest tribunal was located on the second floor of the old state capitol building, on the banks of the Arkansas river. Then the clerical work of the office bordered on manual labor as compared with the modern day record keeping, filing systems and general routine.

Old fashioned quill pens are no novelty to Mr. Campbell, though they have long since disappeared. Early days of the court meant long and patient hours of writing in long hand the records and correspondence and even many of the briefs and transcripts filed by attorneys. Many of these old records, written in the finest Spencerian hand, still are in the files of the court.

Those also were the days of the cap and gown which distinguished the jurists. Not to mention the era of long and vociferous arguments presented by an able group of pioneer barristers.

When Mr. Campbell became an attache of the office, the tribunal was composed of three members. Membership of the court was increased to five by an act of the 189 general assembly and to seven by constitutional amendment in 1925.

Although next October 1 will be a worthwhile anniversary, Mr. Campbell says it will be "just another day on the job."

Speed Increases Oil Consumption

Lubricant Receives the Punishment in Fast Driving

CHICAGO—(AP)—You "step on the gas" to increase an automobile's speed but it's the oil that takes the real punishment.

Ever motorist knows, vaguely, that the faster he drives his car the greater the oil consumption. Now the American automobile association has discovered just what a big difference a few miles-per-hour makes.

A collection of many definite facts on the subject is the result of 9,000 miles of tests conducted by the contest board of the A.A.A. over the Indianapolis speedway track.

Seventeen stock cars, representing 13 different makes—a fair cross-section of the 1931 automobile crop—were given the test.

The cars consumed an average of one quart of oil per thousand miles when driven at 30 miles an hour, but the average jumped up to 6.9 quarts per 1,000 at 55 miles an hour.

The latter amount varied greatly, however, in the different machines, some showing as low as two quarts per 1,000 at the higher speed and others jumping to around 19!

Using heavier oils at high speed reduced consumption, it was shown by the tests, but this saving in oil was at the expense of a loss of 7 per cent in gasoline mileage.

Greater internal friction caused by the heavier oil is held responsible for the drop in gasoline mileage. The lesson in this, the report points out, is that there is no good reason for motorists to vary from the recommended viscosities.

High-speed driving was found to be more expensive from the gasoline-consumption standpoint, also. Miles per gallon averaged from 12.94 to 13.13 at 30 miles an hour, and from 10.4 to 11.08 at the higher rate.

Pipe Organ Built From Cast Off Instruments

LAUREL, Miss.—(AP)—Jeff Seale, 16, watched workmen install a pipe organ in the Baptist church and decided that he should have one of his own.

From three ancient instrument he assembled a two-manual organ that plays passably well.

An old cottage melodeon was purchased for $4 and combined with another one.

The bellows to augment the sound was taken from an old organ that belonged to his mother. The bellows is conected with the organ by bicycle tires.

Heart of Liane

by MABEL McELLIOTT

©1931 by NEA SERVICE INC. NEA FICTION

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

LIANE BARRETT, 18 and lovely, is glad to leave New York when her mother receives an offer to play summer stock at Willow Stream, N. J. SHANE McDERMID, young police officer, comes to tell Liane that the man who had been shot in a speakeasy brawl at which she was an innocent witness will recover. At a party given by MURIEL LADD, debutante, Liane meets VAN ROBARD, whom she had encountered once before. CASS BARRETT begs Liane never to see him again. One night Van asks Liane to accompany him on a search for Muriel and CHUCK DESMOND, reporter, believed to have eloped. ELSIE MINTER, the company ingenue, tells Liane that there is gossip about Robard and Mrs. Ladd. The girl is heart-broken. Liane is invited to spend the autumn with rich MRS. CLEESPAUGH. She finds CLIVE CLEESPAUGH friendly and companionable. News comes of Muriel's engagement to Robard. Liane hears that her mother is seriously ill and rushes to her in Philadelphia. Cass almost dies, babbling in her delirium of her dead sister, Luisa. Mrs. Cleespaugh takes Cass to her home to convalesce.

Clive asks Liane to marry him—a marriage in name only—in order to fulfill the terms of his father's will. At first she is offended but later accepts for her mother's sake. FANNY AMBERTON and her sister, TRESSA LORD, come to visit Mrs. Cleespaugh. Tressa is rude to Liane. Robard comes to dine, and makes love to Liane. She tells him she is to marry Clive.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XX

"THERE'S just one thing I'd like to ask you," Liane said suddenly. The car was running along smoothly under the wet elms. The damp, autumnal wind blew her bronze hair in little ringlets across her cheeks. In the fitful light of the road lamps her young face looked strained, somber.

"What's that?" Clive Cleespaugh wanted to know. He took a packet of cigarets from his pocket with his free hand, reached for the patent lighter which, among other ornaments and gadgets, bestrode the instrument board. In the flare Liane's eyes sought his face as he drew in a draught of fragrant smoke and expelled it gratefully.

"It's about Elsie Minter," Liane explained. "I thought somehow—last summer I got the impression—" She was embarrassed. She could not formulate the words.

"That Elsie and I had a case on each other?" he finished for her, with a note of amused incredulity.

"Yes. That was it." Now that the thing was said Liane felt small and school-girlish. After all, it was none of her business. Just that she didn't want anyone hurt. Elsie, least of all. She was brusque, but she was above all, kind.

"Oh, she must have been stringing you!" Clive said, still amused. "Did you know—surely you must have!—that she and Vernon are to be married as soon as he gets his decree?" He reached over and patted her hand. "I was the old smoke screen, I suppose," he added, dryly. "Vernon's wife was snooping around for evidence. Elsie thought it smart to pretend a flirtation with me."

"Oh!" Liane felt suddenly an immense distaste for all this intrigue. She wanted to go some place where people lived simply and frankly, where there were no plots or underhand affairs.

Clive turned the car into a little lane. Stopped the engine.

"Look, child," he said, "let's talk this thing out. You find the world rather a rotten place, don't you?"

"Sometimes," agreed the young girl, faintly.

"Well, it is and it isn't. Your sense of balance has been upset a little because you were thrown suddenly among sophisticated people before you'd actually grown up. I could see that, first off."

"You saw—what?" murmured Liane, astonished at the young man's perception. "I never thought you noticed me."

* * *

HIS short laugh sounded rather offended. "I noticed," he said grimly. "I saw more than you thought. This may sound foolish and all that but I sort of wanted to protect you. You're too pretty to be running around loose. Goblins'll get you. That's why this engagement of ours would be a shield, a protection."

The girl at his side was silent.

"Don't you agree?"

She was thinking of a dark, troubled face. Of strong hands touching her with a touch that trembled into flame. Protection? Was that, after all, what she wanted?

"Yes. Yes, of course, you're right," she said after an instant.

"Let me tell mother tomorrow," Clive urged. He put his foot on the starter. The engine raced, sputtered into life.

"That girl will hate me," Liane said suddenly with apparent irrelevance.

"What girl? Oh, Tressa?" Clive laughed. "Does she matter?"

"I don't know. Your mother may think so. Your mother may have plans—" Liane paused.

"She may," Clive agreed grimly. "But my plans and Mother's seldom match. You may have noticed that."

"Head better?" he asked, helping her from the car.

With the clasp of that firm, lean hand Liane felt a sudden and unaccountable lightening of heart. She could not have said why but she was somehow happier, more assured than she had been 10 minutes ago.

"Much better," she said.

She rushed past the little room without a glance. She would not give Tressa Lord the satisfaction of thinking she cared!

* * *

TRESSA yawned indolently, stretching her lovely arms in a gesture purely feline. The lace fell away from her shoulders. Her green eyes opened wide, closed again. She looked like a lovely, sleepy cat.

"That Barrett girl's up to something, mind you," she said to Fanny Amberton who reclined on the chaise longue.

"Your imagination works overtime, darling," Fanny answered lazily. "She's a mere child and rather a well-behaved one, I think. At least she doesn't shout and scream the way Muriel did tonight."

"I don't like her." Tressa's green eyes narrowed. "Muriel's all right. She belongs, at any rate. Clever little baggage to have snagged Van Robard for her own. He's filthy with money."

"Van's mother was a fascinating woman," Fanny sighed, reminiscently. "I saw her at Newport when I was in pigtails. Beautiful creature she was. All the men were mad about her. She was Robard's second wife, you know. Van wasn't his son."

"Oh, I didn't mean that!" Tressa, shrugging out of her frock, paused, looking interested.

"He adopted Van legally. Van's father was a nobody. Artist or something of the sort. He left Millie without a penny and she married Dirk Robard within the year. Clever girl." Fanny yawned.

"All this happened when Van was a baby, I suppose?" Tressa said casually.

"Not a bit of it. Van was in prep school. Millie's people put him through I believe. But they were stoney most of the time. Dirk and Millie were married just before the war—in 1913, I believe. You were too young. You wouldn't remember. But there was a lot of newspaper talk. She stopped.

"Newspaper talk?" Tressa asked, her curiosity sharpened by an evasive quality in her sister's voice. "What about? It wasn't a terribly unconventional match, was it?"

"Oh, no. Millicent was a Bradshaw. Baltimore society—the finest. That wasn't it." Fanny glanced at the door uneasily. "I hate to talk about it. Eva might come in. She often does for a late chat."

"Don't be an idiot," Tressa snapped. "She'll knock and then you can change the subject. Anyhow, why should Eva mind?"

"Dirk and she were great friends—and Millie was a distant cousin. You know how she is about her friends and family. Touchy as the deuce."

"Well, tell me anyhow," persisted Tressa. "I'm dying of curiosity."

Fanny leaned forward. "Dirk Robard had been married a few years before," she said solemnly. "It all came out in the newspapers when he married Millie."

"Well, what of it?" Tressa wanted to know. "What had happened?"

"The girl was beautiful everyone said," Fanny explained. "I never saw her but Aunt Addie did and said she was a raving, tearing beauty. Then suddenly she dropped out of sight. No one knew where or why. Dirk went abroad for a year. The rumor was that she had died, but when he married Millie Bradshaw the papers unearthed a divorce. Divorces were more or less news back in 1913."

"They still are," Tressa said drily.

"Anyhow Van came into a good thing," Fanny went on with relish. "He is sole heir to that enormous fortune. Millie died in 1920, a year after Dirk. They left him everything."

* * *

"Good story," she observed, patting in some creamy colored unguent.

"And Muriel Ladd who doesn't need a penny of it is going to step into all that money," Fanny murmured.

"Do you think so, really?" Tressa asked cryptically.

Fanny stared.

Tressa laughed.

"Van's had affairs before," she countered evasively. "You're surely not so naive as to believe that just because his engagement to Muriel has been announced they'll go through with it!"

"Adele had better marry that girl off and quickly, too," Fanny replied. "She's one of the naughty post-war children these dreadful young men are always writing books about."

Tressa yawned.

"Well, if anyone writes a book about Muriel Ladd don't ask me to read it, please. I'd be bored to death. These bad brats who think up shocking things to say weary me."

"You were born seven years too early for that sort of thing," Fanny observed with satisfaction.

"You know I didn't mean to do that," Fanny said amiably.

Tressa leaned nearer to the mirror over the full-skirted dressing table, her eyes opened wide. "Well, I'm reminded of it entirely too often," she said with bitterness. "I'm still on the block and Muriel has had a bidder. Don't rub it in."

Her sister said, "You've had chances. It isn't as if—"

With an impatient gesture Tressa interrupted. "Oh, I know, I know! You've given me every advantage. Let's not go over all that again." Her beautiful mouth was twisted. Her long hands were clenched at her sides.

Fanny attempted to head off the tantrum which threatened. "You're beautiful enough," she said, "to land anybody. But you're too clever, I think. You say things that wound a man's pride. You never lose a chance to be biting."

Tressa frowned. "You always say that. You're milk and water and I'm vinegar. Is that what you mean?"

Fanny refused to be annoyed. "I'm sleepy," she said softly. "And I'm tired of this conversation. You're young enough anyway not to look like a hag after late hours so clear out and let me get my beauty sleep."

Tressa was mollified. Her mercurial temper abated.

"Stop worrying, old lady. I'll get off in style one of these days," she prophesied as she kissed her sister goodnight. "I may have some ideas you don't even suspect on this marriage business."

Fanny affected pleased surprise. She was glad to part for the night on a friendly note. "That's simply marvelous, chick," she said. "Tell me what you're plotting."

"Can't just now," Tressa said. "Wait and see!"

C. E. "Mother"

"It's harder to be good today than 50 years ago, but our young people are just as good," said Mrs. Frances E. Clark, above, 80-year-old "mother" of Christian Endeavor, when she arrived in San Francisco to attend the golden jubilee of the organization. She explained that the good things are played down and the bad things are publicized.

Mo.-Pa. Business Report Shows Improvement

ST. LOUIS.—(AP)—Improvement in the general economic situation in territory served by the Missouri Pacific railroad was shown in June reports of field representatives, President L. W. Baldwin said Tuesday.

As examples of improvement, Baldwin mentioned lumber mills in southeast Arkansas, furniture factories in Fort Smith, and stone quarries in Carthage, Mo. All reported substantial increases this month as compared with the corresponding month last year and anticipated even greater increases this month as compared with last July, Baldwin said.

Periscope Hat Seems to Be on Way to Show

Sponsors of the second international patent exposition to be held in Chicago starting September 14, said that among the devices to be shown was a periscope designed to fit a man's hat, enabling him to see a bandit, should he sneak up behind him.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

New Heroes for Old

TENNESSEE has taken to reading the box scores of games played by the Red Sox and Yankees. The reasons are Earl Webb and William Ben Chapman. Earl is from Ravenscroft, a village in White county, and Ben hails from Nashville.

When Webb first came to the majors he was deemed not good enough. McGraw used him in the outfield four games in 1928, bringing him on from Toledo in midsummer after deciding that Hack Wilson would look better missing curve balls in Toledo than in New York. The next year McGraw sent him to Louisville.

* * *

Turned Back Again

THE Cubs tried him, and he wasn't quite good enough for them. When he hit .250 in 1928 he was turned over to Los Angeles. Washington drafted him and traded him to Boston in the deal for Bill Barrett. Mr. Webb would look good in a Washington, New York or Chicago uniform right now. He has only been hitting around .370 for the Red Sox and leading the league in two-baggers.

It was a 10-year struggle for Earl Webb to catch on in the big show. But he's there—and Boston goes to Fenway Park to watch him play. Chapman is about nine years younger than Webb. Ben won't be 23 until Christmas Day. By that time he will have stolen enough bases to send to all the police in Nashville. He had sneaked 25 sacks up to June 28 and he still goes on grabbing them off one and two a day. If he can escape injury he ought to have 50 by the end of the season.

Not only that but the lad is hitting around .320. He has become a kindred attraction with Babe Ruth at Yankee Stadium. Blind Astronomer, 65, Carries On

NEA Chicago Bureau

When scientists the world over sent congratulations to Professor Edwin B. Frost, director of the Yerkes Observatory, Williams Bay, Wis., on his 65th birthday recently, they were paying tribute to a man who, though blind, ranks as one of the greatest of living astronomers. Prof. Frost, who lost his sight from eye strain scanning the heavens, still directs students and assistants, though he will never again look through the telescope, said to be the world's largest, beside which he is standing. Prof. Frost is shown in closeup in the inset.

Waite Hoyt Beats Old Team, Detroit

Athletics' New Hurler Dazzles Auto Men for His Third Straight

Waite Hoyt entertained his old teammates from Detroit at the Athletics' park in Philadelphia Wednesday and turned them back with seven hits, to win his third straight game since joining the Mackmen.

Hoyt won the first game 5 to 3, and McDonald pitched the Athletics to victory in the second, 11 to 0, for a clean sweep of Wednesday's double-header. The double victory put Philadelphia seven games ahead of Washington for the American League pennant.

The Red Sox divided a twin bill with the St. Louis Browns, winning the first 5 to 4, but losing the nightcap 5 to 2. The Yankees beat Cleveland 5 to 4.

In the National League, Watson Clark, Brooklyn's sensational left-hander, mowed down the St. Louis Cardinals 10 to 3, for his seventh consecutive pitching victory. Clark allowed the National League leaders but seven hits.

Pittsburgh walloped the Phils, 4 to 2. The Chicago Cubs made it two straight form the New York Giants, 5 to 4, a single by Kiki Cuyler scoring the winning run in the ninth. The victory brought the Cubs back to within half a game of the second-place Giants, in the National League race. Cincinnati defeated the Boston Braves 1 to 0.

Painful Piles

Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves

It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt's prescription—HEM-ROID—to end itching, bleeding, protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in old, stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it heals and restores the affected parts and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that's why salves and cutting fail. Ward & Son say HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.—Adv.

ANY TIRE manufacturer or dealer who tells you a "breaker strip" is a "ply"—or that tire performance depends on weight—deceives you.

BEWARE THE MAN WHO TELLS YOU THIS IS A PLY

It is NOT A PLY, it is a breaker strip! The National Better Business Bureau defines a "ply" as follows—

> "A ply is one of a number of layers of rubberized cotton fabric, either cord or square woven, extending from bead to bead, and forming the body of the tire."

Four or six plies form the carcass or the body of the tire. If the fabric does NOT extend entirely around the tire from BEAD TO BEAD, IT IS NOT A PLY. The illustration points out the difference between a ply and a breaker strip. It also points out the "beads."

Certain manufacturers and dealers, jealous of Ward's commanding position in the tire industry, have made misleading statements about Ward's tires. They have published and displayed misleading charts—they have shown sections of obsolete tires—they compare their "second line" tires with our "first line" tires—and now in advertising and selling talks, "breaker strips" are being called "plys." These misleading statements, however, are cleverly worded and the breaker strip is called "a ply under the tread." No twisting of words, however, can turn a BREAKER STRIP into a PLY. Every tire manufacturer and dealer knows it, AND WE BELIEVE THE CUSTOMER, TOO, IS ENTITLED TO KNOW THE FACTS.

BEWARE THE MAN WHO SAYS WEIGHT DENOTES SUPERIORITY

Many readers are familiar with the recent Firestone ads which compare Firestone tires with unidentified mail order tires. Weight has been given prominence as one of the items of comparison. Montgomery Ward & Co. maintains that weight is NOT AN INDICATION OF TIRE QUALITY.

We recently purchased five Firestone Oldfield tires and five Firestone High Speed tires—the High Speed tire is more expensive than the Oldfield. These tires were carefully weighed by Dr. Ellery H. Harvey, and the results are shown in the statement at the right.

In the first place, note that there is a variation of five ounces between the heaviest and the lightest Oldfield, and that there is a six-ounce variation between the heaviest and the lightest Firestone High Speed. MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL NOTE THAT THE AVERAGE WEIGHT OF THE OLDFIELD IS ONE POUND FIVE OUNCES HEAVIER THAN THE AVERAGE WEIGHT OF THE HIGH SPEED TIRES. If weight denotes superiority, why is the cheaper Firestone tire heavier than the more expensive Firestone tire? Surely this should convince any unbiased person how ridiculous it is to consider weight an indication of tire quality. Again we say, WE BELIEVE THE CUSTOMER IS ENTITLED TO KNOW THE FACTS.

On June 20, 1931, I weighed five Firestone Oldfield tires on a tested Howe scale. Immediately after on the same scale I weighed five Firestone four ply High Speed tires. All ten tires were size 4.50-21. They weighed as follows:

	Firestone Oldfield	Firestone 4-Ply High Speed
	17 lbs. 8 oz.	16 lbs. 5 oz.
	17 lbs. 9 oz.	16 lbs. 1 oz.
	17 lbs. 6 oz.	16 lbs. 7 oz.
	17 lbs. 7 oz.	16 lbs. 3 oz.
	87 lbs. 9 oz.	81 lbs. 2 oz.
Avg. wt. per tire	17 lbs. 8 oz.	16 lbs. 3 oz.
Variation between lightest and heaviest tire	5 oz.	6 oz.

The* RIVERSIDE *is our first quality tire. It is made by one of the largest tire companies in the world. It is built to one of the most stringent sets of specifications in the tire industry. It has been sold by Ward's for 19 years. Millions are in use today. Riversides are backed by a guarantee without limit as to time or mileage. Other famous nationally advertised tires that are equal to Riversides are much higher priced than Riversides.

The table at the right gives you the sizes for size price comparison. Having studied the price comparison with other makes, the only question for you to ask is: "Are Riverside tires really as good as these other tires with which they are compared?" Well, Montgomery Ward & Co. is one of the largest and oldest merchandise institutions in the world. It is the originator of the "Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back" guarantee. It depends for its business not only on tires but also on some 40,000 other items of merchandise which it sells to you. Certainly it is reasonable to believe that Ward's is maintaining the truth in making these statements.

FREE MOUNTING SERVICE AT EVERY WARD STORE

The* TRAIL BLAZER *is our second quality tire. It is equal to any of the "second line" tires offered by well known tire companies. As you no doubt know, close to 90% of all newspaper advertising of the big tire companies is devoted to their "second line" tires, and it is these tires with which Trail Blazers compare. However, Trail Blazers SELL FOR LESS than other second line tires.

This combination of quality with lowest price which is offered by Ward's seems to have made some of our competitors very envious, so they are making and publishing misleading and incorrect statements about mail order tires. But they do not compare their first quality tires with our Riversides and their second quality tires with our Trail Blazers. They know to do so would immediately indicate how much lower Ward's tires are priced. So they have cunningly priced their "second line" tires at exactly our Riverside prices, and they print comparison tables which are intended to make people believe that their prices are the same as ours. Well, they are not. The chart at the left is a true comparison, quality for quality, and price for price.
